The hypnotic powers of the Rev. Dr. Simpson are in nowise abated. At Old Orchard last Sunday he raised the considerable sum of $4200 for mission work. In the forenoon Dr. Simpson preached to an outdoor audience of about 3,500, a powerful missionary sermon. The collection was started with a gift of 25 cents, from a little boy recently converted, and 28 cents from a woman who said it was all the money she possessed. The collection, which was being made one cent given by a little girl to $5,000 there being one pledge of the latter amount. There were about 100 pledges of $15 each, for the support of famine orphans in India.

A final census report on street and electric railways shows that the North Atlantic states contain nearly one-half of the total single track mileage of the United States and that the roads located there operate over half the passenger cars in service, carry more than half of the total fare passengers and give employment to more than half the employees reported by all roads. The report shows that the average street and electric railway in operation in 1902 was more than twice as large as the average in 1890. The aggregate surplus for the 483 companies reporting a surplus amounted to $51,941,159 and the aggregate deficit for 225 companies reporting a deficit amounted to $11,285,047, leaving a net surplus for all companies in the United States of $40,656,112.

The sales of anthracite coal this summer have been extremely large. Moreover, mining operations have been on in never before known extent, and the railroads and other corporations have been storing up tall, thick heaps of the precious fuel. "A dollar saved is a dollar earned" rule has started, and the anthracite "in the bit" may be useful in case of labor "troubles later" is a saying which has found extensive acceptance and approval. Men and brethren, buy your anthracite now, and make your purchases liberal. You can get a great deal of fuel this month at fair prices. Later the quotations will rise. Be prudent. Remember how you suffered last winter. Don't take the chances of risk and dangers of enduring not only discomfort but actual misery from lack of heat in the coming cold season. How can you tell what Mitchell will do or leave undone in midwinter? Get warm while you can, and keep warm. Get anthracite by all means, and lay in large stores of it. You may need huge treasures of it when the snow is on the ground. In any event, it is as good as gold in its way. No one can water it extravagantly or make it worthless. "THEY THINK GOD DID IT."

But Miss Alice Moore State W. C. T. U. Organizer, Says That Men's Votes Will Alone Prevent Resubmission.

"If we can't enforce prohibition, we can't enforce license," this was the tenor of a most interesting address delivered last Thursday evening by Miss Alice Moore of this city before the Androscoggin branch of the W. C. T. U. and has made a careful study for several years of matters pertaining to the prohibitory question. Of her address in Androscoggin county the Lewiston Journal said:

"Miss Moore was warmly applauded as she came forward, and she proved to be a most charming and forceful speaker. She began by saying that the motto of Prussia was this: 'What you want in the state you must have in the home.'"

"For many years we have had a law on the statutes of Maine in the interest of prohibition. Some people thought that was enough, and didn't realize that the same sentiment must be kept fresh in the home."

"Shall our prohibitory law be resubmitted? Not a thousand times no! The grange and the W. C. T. U. must go out clad in the armor of truth and get at the people. You have all thought that the W. C. T. U. was merely a woman's society, but it is a great educator as well, and it will continue to educate until every law is honored in our midst."

"Some have said to me that God would not let this law be destroyed. This is nonsense. You must all work or it will go. Now Hampshire temperance people thought that God would take care of their law and they remained at home on the day of election with the result that they lost their law. Now, they are feeling sore over the results. One town with 600 voters only cast 125 ballots. Part of these were paid to vote and part were rumblers. Church members wouldn't even cross the street to vote."

"Some men advocate re-submission. As I go over the state they tell me that Maine and its law is a good school to turn out hypocrites. I told me that they were tired of non-enforcement. The reason for this is a lack of backbone to enforce the law. They are not yet educated to the standard that this business is a crime. Bangor is crying for license. Can you manage a few nice saloons and keep out the kitchen bars and slums? No! For every high toned and licensed saloon you will have two dives. License is not an educator. Unless the spirit is among the people, nothing can be done. If you can't enforce prohibition, then you can't enforce license. Some want license in order to stop the low saloons. They would have only high toned ones. How is it in Massachusetts? In Boston, men pay a license of $1,000, and there are 100 kitchen bars. The license men to not dare to send a policeman among them for they will turn around and have them arrested for violating the law. The low ones keep their spies out watching the big saloons, and thus hold a whip over their heads. Both sides are being kept still, and the law and unlicensed saloons multiply and flourish."

"How is it in New Hampshire? I recently asked the mayor of Lakeport if the fine saloons had driven out the low ones; if the rumblers were all good men and shut up on schedule time; if there were fewer drunks and less crime. He replied: 'Come to my office tonight and I will show you four drunken men pass it where only one did before the license law was adopted. The people of another town were almost unanimous against saloons, but the state law gave a license to the only druggist in town. That said he had destroyed the Spanish fleet could have put those ships and men all back again and then said: 'Now I will go outside the harbor and then come back and see if I can capture them again!' What would you thought of such generalship as that? It is far easier to keep a fort than it is to take it."

"The W. C. T. U. are now at work and are devoted to the cause. I ask you, grangers, to go out among your people and educate them. Teach them how to discern the best and then stand by it. You men have the ballot, but we women have the tongue. Let every sister use this weapon and re-submission can never raise its head in Maine. Realize your own power and learn that you are true reformers. Teach the people that the law must be honored, and the word Prohibition means I lead in good citizenship and good morals."

The eloquent young lady was loudly applauded at the close of her keen and spirited speech.

MISS LILIAN MAY, WHO WILL SOON WED LORD BAGOT.

Miss Lilian May, who will soon join the group of beautiful women representing America among twentieth century peeresses of Great Britain, has been a good deal in Europe and is well known and popular there. The future Lady Bagot was a daughter of the late Mr. Henry May of Maryland. Lord Bagot succeeded to the title sixteen years ago.

the place how he liked the change, and he replied:

"I only wish that you could take that sight down to Maine, and exhibit it in every town. If you could do so you would hear no more about re-submission and license."

"Even as poorly as the law is enforced in Maine it is vastly better than a license system would be. The people who come here from other states all admit this, and are wild over the condition at home."

"Some think that the license sentiment can easily be defeated. A few years ago a license movement was started but we easily defeated it. Temperance men patted each other on the back and congratulated themselves on the victory. Last winter the same thing was attempted in the Legislature and we again defeated it. The same class are again congratulating themselves on the easy victory and think that God did it. Let me assure you that the fight is still going on. The license men are thoroughly organizing and have many bright men in their ranks. They are making a systematic and everlasting fight. They have thousands of dollars at their command. All this being done while the temperance men are praying about God's will being done. The 'Thy-will-be-done' people are staying at home. The 'Kingdom-come' vote remains idle."

"There can be but one result to this apathy. New Hampshire has taught us what it will be. You must work and use your best efforts to see that the law is enforced."

"Some of our papers are advocating re-submission and use as an argument that it will strengthen the law. Let us see. Supposing Admiral Dewey after he had destroyed the Spanish fleet could have put those ships and men all back again and then said: 'Now I will go outside the harbor and then come back and see if I can capture them again!' What would you thought of such generalship as that? It is far easier to keep a fort than it is to take it."

Have the Children.

Ninety nine out of every one hundred diseases that children have are due to disorders of the stomach, and these disorders are all caused by indigestion. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is just as good for children as it is for adults. Children thrive on it. It keeps their little stomachs sweet and encourages their growth and development. Mrs. Henry Carter, 705 Central Street, Nashville, Tenn., says: "My little boy is now three years old and has been suffering from indigestion ever since he was born. I have had the best doctors in Nashville, but failed to do him any good. After using one bottle of Kodol he is a well baby. I recommend it to all sufferers. Kodol digests what you eat and makes the stomach sweet. Sold by W. C. Pooler."

Chats on Books.

Louis Becker's new novel, published by the J. B. Lippincott Company, is called "The Strange Adventures of James Sherinton." The scene is laid, as in all of this writer's books, among the South Sea Islands.

Hamilton Wright Mable has written a new book which will soon be published by the Outlook Company. It is called "Backgrounds of Literature," and it is made up of essays on Wordsworth, Emerson, Goethe, Scott, Shakespeare, Irving and other poets and prose writers. There will be a good deal of description in the book, based on the landscapes which were familiar to the various writers treated.

A reward of $300 is offered for information leading to the present whereabouts of a manuscript of 1734, written by the Rev. Lewis Rou, entitled, "Critical Remarks upon the Letter to the 'Craftsmen on the Game of Chess.' It was dedicated 'To His Excellency William Cosby, Esq., Captain General and Commander in Chief Over the Provinces of New York and New Jersey.' Information may be sent to the Librarian of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

The new edition of the "Merrmaid Series" of the old English dramatists is to be published in this country by the Scribners. They announce for early appearance three volumes devoted respectively to Marlowe, Otway and Congreve. This new edition will be printed on this paper and a dainty binding, there will be an etched frontispiece to each volume. As we observed in speaking a short time ago of this revival of a sterling series of reprints, it is to include several entirely new volumes. One of them will be given to Dryden, a fact that should be of lively interest to many students.

Doubleday, Page & Co. have just published the second installment of "The Poultry Book," which is said to be the most ambitious and complete book on the subject, as well as the most beautiful. Part Three is almost completely taken up about eggs. All phases of producing them, either for the market or for hatching, are fully covered, including even the best methods for commercial handling that now give the "fancy fresh eggs" the year round. The work has many illustrations and colored plates, and it is intended to be almost an encyclopedia in extent, though it is above all a practical guide for anybody who owns any sort of poultry whatever, from the more common varieties to the rarest breeds.

According to Harper's literary bulletin, Mrs. Humphry Ward dislikes making speeches, and avoids the unpleasant duty whenever it is possible to do so. When she feels the obligation unavoidable she talks with excellent effect, but in so low a tone that only those sitting near can follow her discourse. At the recent dinner given in her honor at the New Vagabond Club, London, she was introduced by Mr. Jerome K. Jerome. In a humorous speech, to which Mrs. Ward responded by saying that while she did not know the sensations of "three men in a boat," she knew very well how it felt to be "one woman in a frigate" in manner when speaking is very earnest, and her subject matter generally of a serious character.

Within the fortnight Doubleday, Page & Co. publish Justus Miles Forman's new novel, "Monogamy." Mr. Forman, a successful novel, "Journeys End," was issued in a very attractive form by the same publishers and gained a place on the list of best-selling books of the past season. The former was a story of a young English lord who won his way alone in America as playwright, while the new novel deals with the beautiful descendant of a famous French family and grand-daughter of an English Earl, and the complications following the false accusation by the man she loves. It is said to be a much more ambitious work than the author's other story, combining with the same light touch and deft grace, a forcefulness and reality of passion that hold the reader from the start.

Is a hero worth more dead or alive? The old rule for story telling used to be that, whatever happened and however great the carnage, the hero should come out with his life. But the spirit of commercialism now points out a new way. A dead hero, especially if he is a beloved detective, is worth far more than a live one—least according to the recent reports circulating concerning a new book by A. Conan Doyle. Mr. Doyle has done some body-snatching. He has exhumed the dead Sherlock Holmes. He is going to get a good price for it, much more, indeed, than he was ever able to get for Sherlock before he killed him. The rumor at least is that for twelve stories of about 9,000 words each, Mr. Doyle was to be paid about $100,000, which would make the honorable author's "first" and "last" "thes" and "hues" worth almost $1,000 apiece. There will probably be only eight stories, according to a later account, but the rate will be the same. After these notable tales have appeared in serial form, they will be published as a book by McClure, Phillips & Company.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

He Never Smiled Again.

The bark that held a prince went down, The sleeping waves rolled on; And what was England's glorious crown To him that went a son? He lived for life may long be borne Ere sorrow broke his chain; Why cause not death to those who mourn? He never smiled again!

These staid proud forms around his throne, The stately and the brave, But which could fill the place of one— That one beneath the wave? Before him passed the young and fair, In ease and in delight; But seas dashed o'er his son's bright hair— He never smiled again!

He sat where fatal bowls went round; He heard the minstrel sing, He saw the tourney's victor crown'd; Amid the brightly ring, A murmur of the restless deep Was heard with every strain; A voice of woe that would not sleep— He never smiled again!

Hearts, in that time closed o'er the trace Of some one fondly poured, And strangers took the kinsman's place At many a princely board; Graves, which true love had bathed with tears, Were left to some bright rain; Fresh hopes were born for other years— He never smiled again! Felicia H. Mearns.

The Courier-Gazette.

IF PEOPLE neglect to observe some obvious lessons in an occasion of great sorrow such as Rockland this week has experienced, they fall in a very plain matter of duty. The Courier-Gazette never has essayed to preach, but we read in connection with this recent accident one truth so apparent that we are impelled to give it added emphasis. Amid the expressions of universal sorrow is heard one insistent note that lends relief: it is the unqualified testimony to the high character of the young men who died. This is the thing we would have kept before the young men and boys of our community. Crocker, Veazie, Holmes and Hall were all boys reared in modest circumstances. None of them was dowered either by wealth or rank of birth. Each had his way to carve out for himself. They grew up in our city, running the gauntlet of temptations common to all cities of this sort, and every one of them came through with a high, bright record. The business men of Rockland had observed each one of them from his boyhood up. The business men are always observing the boys and noting with satisfaction everything in their progressive career toward young manhood that stamps them as boys that are honorable and right. The reason that the business men of Rockland have mourned this week, adding most remarkable testimony to the general interest in these young men, lies in this recognition of the quality of character which rendered those young men conspicuous. We cannot disregard the feeling that impels us to call attention to this truth, and to urge it upon the thoughtful consideration of the young men of Rockland. Young men, make no mistake. Character is the thing that counts, not family, not wealth nor position. And you are building your character every day as you go in and out upon your affairs of study, of the home and of your sports and pastimes. It may be that some lessons of this sort will come to be considered by the youth of our community, that shall make the recent occasion of grief not altogether without hope.

Four Impressive Funerals.

The Young Men of the Recent Tragedy Laid To Rest Amid Remarkable Public Demonstration of Grief

Funeral services over the victims of the recent tragedy at Ash Point were held Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon, and the people paid a tribute which is without precedent in the history of the city. Everywhere the accident seemed to be recognized as a public calamity, and for the first time in the case of young men not identified with public life, the stores along Main street closed, and business of all kinds was practically suspended between the hours of 1 and 5 p. m. The window of one business establishment was draped in mourning. Along Main street the stillness of Sabbath prevailed, for many business men and practically all of the Young Men's club were the houses of mourning, paying their last respects.

The baseball games scheduled in connection with the Old Home Week series were promptly cancelled and there was a marked abandonment of everything pertaining to gaiety. Some of the adjoining towns manifested their sympathy and sorrow by sending quite large delegations to attend the funerals.

From the University of Maine, as official representative, came Prof. Ralph K. Jones, the college librarian. President Fellows were also present, the services but his business duties were such as to render this impossible. Instead he sent to the families of Crocker and Veazie letters expressing the tenderest sympathy and the highest appreciation of the deceased colleagues. He had been connected with the college only one year, but in that short time he had come to greatly honor and respect the young men. Letters were also received by these families from several of the college professors. Among the University of Maine students and alumni who attended the funerals, also representing the Beta Theta Pi fraternity were J. Harvey McClure and Ralph E. Lord of Bangor, Paul D. Simpson of Sullivan, Edward Thomas, George Wilson and Burton Thomas of Portland, Thomas V. Hodges of Bridgton, Edward Levensaler of Thomaston, Ralph Bird, Alan Bird, John Bird and C. Vey Holman of this city.

The Calliopean Society of Kent's Hill, to which Hall belonged, was represented by James Reed of Waterville, Ralph Gilman of Brooklyn and G. L. Pressey of Camden.

The first of the four funerals was that of Charles W. Holmes, and took place Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from the residence of Capt. and Mrs. John H. Holmes, parents of the deceased, Masonic street. The young man had belonged to no college and fraternity, but the attendance was extremely large and included an exceptionally large number of the city's representative young men. Rev. E. H. Chapin, pastor of the Universalist church officiated. The pall-bearers were Roy L. Knowlton, Frank S. Rhodes, Richard A. Rhodes, Oliver P. Hills, Ralph Bird and Thomas P. Hayden. The wealth of floral tributes included the following designs: Crescent, Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Gay and Mrs. Abbie G. Gay; standing crescent, class of 1900, Rockland High school; wreath, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Burpee; pillow, members of the family; basket, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Thomas and Mrs. Henry Crane; standing crescent, R. H. Crockett and William H. Bird; large cluster of white roses, Rockland Produce Co.; large cluster of roses, Donohue's Pharmacy. Another emblem represented a large square tablet of pink roses with the name of the deceased. A similar tribute was sent to each funeral. They came from "the crowd," a self-chosen name for

A FANCY FAIR.

Penobscot View Grange Will Hold One This Coming Week.

Final arrangements are about made for the fancy fair of Penobscot View Grange, which takes place at their hall next Tuesday and Wednesday, and all should make an effort to attend, as they will get their money's worth, and incidentally help the grange. Aprons, handkerchiefs, bags, fancy work and fancy articles will be sold, while all should patronize the post office, fish pond and gipsy camp. Candy, ice cream and other refreshments will be on sale, and there will be an art display. A supper and entertainment will be features of Tuesday's session, and a dance will conclude the fair Wednesday evening.

The grange will confer the third and fourth degrees on several candidates at its meeting Thursday evening, so that they can attend the Pomona session at West Rockport with Mt. Pleasant Grange the following night.

The session last Thursday evening was an especially interesting meeting. There was a good attendance, and a fine program was presented, an especially enjoyable feature of which were the vocal solos by various patrons. At the conclusion of the program, all joined in singing old fashioned and college songs.

from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Hudson G. Hall, parents of the deceased, Broadway. Rev. E. H. Chapin of the Universalist church officiated. The services were marked by the same large attendance and floral display that had characterized the services of the previous day. Among the floral tributes were the following special designs: Large tablet with name of the deceased in center, from "The Crowd"; crescent, from the class of 1902, Rockland High school; pillow, from the Camden Anchor-Rockland Machine Co.; arch, from four cousins—Harry, Mrs. J. Kin and William D. Hall, and Hudson D. Ames of Camden; pillow, from the Calliopean fraternity at Kent's Hill; large pillow, from Mr. and Mrs. Hudson G. Hall. Several representatives of the Wesleyan Seminary at Kent's Hill were present. The pall-bearers were Ralph Bird, Thomas P. Hayden, Oliver Hills, Roy Knowlton, Richard A. Rhodes and Frank S. Rhodes.

The final chapter in the tragedy was enacted at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon when the funeral of Henry K. Crocker took place. The services were held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Crocker, Orange street, parents of the deceased. The attendance and floral display were extremely large. Among the floral designs were the following: Basket of pink roses and maidenhair fern, Beta Eta Chapter; pillow of sweet peas and lilies, Edward Heller, David G. Hodgkins and Arthur P. Haines; wreath with stars in center, class of '99, Rockland High school; broken circle of pink roses, maidenhair ferns and lilies of the valley, from the family. The tablet above referred to, bore the name of "Hall" in the center. The floral tributes included an immense number of roses, American Beauties and delicate pink and white roses. The piano was banked with pink and the walls with white and white sweet peas and asters. The pall-bearers were Paul Simpson of Sullivan, Harvey McClure and Ralph E. Lord of Bangor, Frank S. Rhodes, Richard A. Rhodes, Roy Knowlton, Oliver Hills, and Ralph Bird. The impressive committal service was held at the grave. Three of the bodies were interred at Achorn cemetery. The Crocker burial was at Sea View, Bay Point.

The Phalarope is the craft of U. S. Fish Commissioner Bowers. It carries a crew of seven men and has been cruising along this coast in pursuit of lobster eggs for the Gloucester hatchery. Commissioner Bowers and family were aboard, and had as special guests State Commissioner Nickerson and family. They have been inspecting the site of the proposed hatchery at Boothbay Harbor.

The yachting Phalarope, for she looks enough like a yacht to be called one, was in the harbor Wednesday, and attracted a great deal of attention, even among the residents of the water front who have been surfeited this summer by a view of almost everything which can float. GREENE-REED RECITAL.

The recital given by Miss Lizette S. Greene of South Thomaston, and Miss Mabel E. Reed of Waldoboro, at Penobscot View Grange was a most enjoyable entertainment and the program presented was one which fully demonstrated the talents of these young ladies as accomplished musicians and readers. Those who attended speak highly in praise of the efforts of Misses Greene and Reed.

The program presented was as follows:

Piano: Duo, Overture to Zampa, Herold; Misses Reed and Greene; Contralto solo, "My Aime Country," Miss Greene; reading, "The Manifestation," Miss Reed; violin solo, selected, Miss Greene; piano solo, "William Tell," Rossini, Miss Reed; reading, "John Harding," Miss Greene; piano duo, Lusstspiel Overture, Misses Reed and Greene; contralto solo, selected, Miss Greene; reading, "One of Job's Comforters," Miss Reed; violin solo, a Air Varie, Dancie, B. Melody, Bohm, Miss Greene; piano solo, a Minuet, Paderewski; Prelude, Chaminade, Miss Reed; reading, Miss Greene; Piano duo, "The Poet and Peasant," Misses Reed and Greene.

The first number on the program proved a fitting introduction of these young ladies as musicians, and their execution of this difficult selection, was most creditable, showing careful training, as did also, the other piano duos which followed. The contralto solos by Miss Greene were rendered with much expression and in a most pleasing manner, the second number, "Ashore" being more favorably received by the audience, perhaps.

The reading "The Manifestation" by Miss Reed was delivered in a realistic and thrilling manner with graceful and appropriate gesture, while her second selection "One of Job's Comforters" was one of the hits of the evening, and convulsed the audience. The piano solos by Miss Reed received a charming rendition at her hands, and showed that her reputation as one of the finest pianists at Kent's Hill, was merited. The violin numbers by Miss Greene were well received, and gracefully and skillfully executed.

The reading "John Harding" was delivered by Miss Greene with much feeling, she entered fully into the spirit of the poem, and carrying her audience with her, while her second reading which was of a humorous nature, and depicted the reception of the new minister by the hired girl under the impression that he was a book agent or peddler, was most entertaining.

Every number on the program was received with applause, and all those who attended can recommend the entertainment given by these young ladies as one of much merit, and excellence, and they should have no difficulty in securing other engagements in this vicinity.

Penobscot View Grange realized a neat sum from the recital.

Proper Shoes For Men's Feet

The one absolutely necessary thing about shoes is that they shall fit. Unless they fit you feel "slouchy," walk clumsily, dragging the feet along, because they are tired—All because you bought shoes without regard to fit.

The KONQUEROR

Shoes is one we can recommend. The name fits the shoe. Built well inside and out, look well tramping about, wears well, easy and neat, long lived, light on the feet.

$4.00, $3.50 and $3.00

YOU WILL LIKE THEM IF YOU ONCE WEAR THEM.

The FRANKLIN

The best possible shoe for the money ever made. This has been proven by the severest tests. Made for wear, although neat and attractive looking. Has style, wear and is cheap.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

There will be a special meeting of the Board of Trade this Friday evening in the common council rooms. Business of importance, in relation to the coming of the warships here next week, will be discussed. Every business man should be present.

The increasing popularity of the 10.10 train, or gilt-edged limited as it is known in railroad parlance, is shown by the fact that it has been necessary to add another parlor car, making three which will be attached to this train as it leaves Bath.

The Warships Are Coming.

The big fleet of warships which was recently assembled at Bar Harbor and which will be reviewed by President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay next Monday is coming to Rockland. It leaves Oyster Bay Monday night and will sail directly for Rockland, where it will rendezvous several days before proceeding to the attack on Portland.

The fleet will probably be here at least three full days—Wednesday, Thursday and Friday—although there is nothing official to that effect. The news that the warships were coming was first received indirectly by Collector Wright from Admiral Barker and was confirmed by Bar Harbor dispatches.

The fleet will take on coal while in the bay, and one of the coal colliers is already in the outer harbor. The Maine naval reserves, about 50 in number, will also embark here to take part in the army and navy maneuvers.

The presence of this immense fleet, containing some of the best warships in Uncle Sam's collection will draw thousands of people to Rockland next week. Excursions will probably be made in the morning and the afternoon.

The North Atlantic Squadron will surely attack Rockland next week. And it will just as surely capture it.

Charles T. Saul, well known to our people, will be in the city for a few weeks, closing his office in Boston while here.

John C. Chase of Haverhill, Mass., the first Socialist to be elected a mayor in this country, will speak in Post Office square at 7:30 Saturday evening, and will also speak at Utopia Park Sunday afternoon.

The Street Railway is improving the roadbed of its track on Camden street, and has made some alterations on the Yaverick Square siding. A waiting station is being built at the corner of Camden street and Waldo avenue.

Some residents of the upper Meadows desire to be forewarned the next time Fred goes to shoot king birds. One of the women in that locality is minus a golden lock as the result of his recent efforts, to say nothing of the great scare she sustained.

Ralph W. E. Thorndike who has been running as express messenger on the steamer City of Bangor, is now in the local American Express office, substituting while the various members of the staff have their vacations. L. H. C. Wignin is having his vacation this week.

The Rockland Produce Co. occupies its new quarters in Farwell opera house block, which a yacht owner equipped for all the business it can handle. The store was last occupied by J. P. Gregory & Son, but the interior has been remodeled to suit the convenience of the produce company.

Ex-Sheriff W. J. Caddy of St. George was in the city this week and received a hearty greeting from many friends. Mr. Caddy is handicapped at present by a very lame leg which was injured at Waldoboro some weeks ago by a flying granite chip. The wound did not heal in the accustomed time and continues to annoy Mr. Caddy at intervals.

A despatch was received in this city Thursday announcing the death of Mrs. Austin Sprague of Haverhill, Mass. She had many friends in this vicinity who will learn of her demise with leaves. She leaves a husband, Ezra Young, of Camden, a niece, Mrs. John E. Leach of this city, as well as other relatives in Massachusetts. Mrs. Leach left for Haverhill Wednesday, but did not arrive there until after her death.

The district messenger service recently put on by the Western Union Telegraph Co. had an unusual call one day this week. A yacht owner asked for a messenger to get some letters, telegrams, etc. at Bar Harbor and carry them to Bangor. The errand was faithfully performed by Charles Johnson, who took the steamerboat for Bar Harbor and then proceeded by rail to Bangor, delivering the desired package in due season.

The store of the Lamson Hardware Co. on Sea street had some unexpected visitors late Tuesday night. The first delegation arrived just before midnight and was evidently effecting an entrance through one of the windows when Mr. Lamson, who resides overhead, heard the noise and challenged the intruders. As a countersign they responded with three shots from a revolver. Presumably blank cartridges were used, as there was no sound of striking bullets. The police questioned several late pedestrians but obtained no clew save that a tall man was seen running away from the building. Later in the night Mr. Lamson again heard suspicious noises in the store, but the spirits did not materialize.

The torpedo boat destroyer referred to in our Tuesday issue as having been ashore on Grandstone ledge proves to have been the Decatur. Bar Harbor dispatches say that two blades of one of her propellers were broken, and that she went to New York for repairs before taking part in the maneuvers off Oyster Bay. Very few vessels get away from Grandstone ledge without leaving a more substantial souvenir than two propeller blades.

The embryo shipyard near the Brown wharf at the Northend was sold at auction Thursday by Deputy Sheriff Heald. Most of the knees were bought by Messrs. Fletcher and Bicknell. There were about 10 tons of timber at the yard and it was bought principally by Thompson and Rockland builders. The price paid for the first 30 knees was $2.50 each. The bed-logs had been put in place, but the yard has never desisted to get beyond that point. The proprietor is now in Bath working at his trade of sail-making.

CHAPTER XVII.

PURPOSELY we entered Mittau about sunset, which was nearer 10 o'clock than 9 in that northern land.

The palace stood conspicuous upon an island in the river. We approached it looked not unlike a copy of Versailles. The pile was by no means brilliant with lights, as the court of a king might glitter, finding reflection upon the stream. We drove with a clatter upon the paving, and a sentinel challenged us.

I had thought of how I should obtain access to this secluded royal family, and Skenedon was ready with the queen's jewel case in his hands. Not on any account was he to let it go out of them until I took it and applied the key; but, gaining audience with Mme. d'Angouleme, he was to tell her that the bearer of that casket had traveled far to see her and waited outside.

Under guard the Oneida had the great doors shut behind him. The wisdom of my plan looked less conspicuous as time went by. The palace loomed silent, without any cheer of courtesies. The horses shook their straps, and the postilion hung lazily by one leg, his figure distinct against the low horizon still lighted by afterglow. Some Mittau noises came across the air, the rumble of wheels and a barking of dogs.

When apprehension began to pinch my heart of losing my servant and my whole fortune in the abode of honest royal people, and I felt myself but a poor outcast come to seek a princess for my sister, a guard stood by the carriage, touching his cap, and asked me to follow him.

We ascended the broad steps. He gave the password to a sentinel there and held wide one leaf of the door. He took a candle, and otherwise dark corridors and antechambers, somber with heavy Russian furnishings, rugs hung against the walls, barbaric bronzes and curious vases, passed like a half seen vision.

Then the guard delivered me to a gentleman in a blue coat with a red collar, who belonged to the period of the Marquis du Plessy without being adorned by his whiteness and lace. The gentleman, staring at me, strangely polite and full of suspicion, conducted me into a well lighted room where Skenedon waited by the farther door, holding the jewel case as tenaciously as he would a sacred relic.

I entered the farther door. It closed behind me. A girl stood in the center of this inner room looking at me. I remember none of its fittings, except that there was abundant light, showing her clear blue eyes and fair hair, the transparency of her skin and her high expression. She was all in black except a floating muslin cape or fichu, making a beholder despite the finery of the empire.

We must have examined each other even sternly, though I felt a sudden gliding way and heaving in my breast. She was so high, so sincere. If I had been unit to meet the eyes of that princess I must have shivered before her.

From side to side her figure swayed, and another young girl, the only attendant in the room, stretched out both arms to catch her.

We put her on a couch, and she sat gasping, supported by the lady in waiting. Then the tears ran down her face, and I kissed the transparent hands, my own flesh and blood I believed that hour as I believe to this.

"Oh, Louis! Louis!"

The wonder of her knowledge and acceptance of me without a claim being put forward was around me like a cloud.

"You were so like my father as you stood there. I could see him again as he parted from us. What miracle has restored you? How did you find your way here? You are surely Louis?"

I sat down beside her, keeping one hand between mine.

"Madame, I believe, as you believe, that I am Louis Charles, the dauphin of France. And I have come to you first as my own flesh and blood, who must have more knowledge and recollection of things past than I myself can have. I have not long been waked out of the trance of life I formerly lived."

"I have wept more tears for the little brother—broken in intellect and exiled further than we than for my father and mother. They were at peace. But you, poor child, what hope was there for you? Was the person who had you in his charge kind to you? He must have been. You have grown to be such a man as I would have you."

"Everybody has been kind to me, my sister."

"Could they look in that face and be unkind? All the thousand questions I have to ask must be deferred until the king sees you. I cannot wait for him to see you. Mlle. de Choisy, send a message at once to the king."

The lady in waiting withdrew to the door, and the royal duchess quivered with eager anticipation.

"We have had pretended dauphins to add insult to exile. You may not take the king unawares, as you took me. He will have proofs as plain as his Latin verse. But you will find his majesty all that a father could be to us, Louis. I think there never was a man so unselfish, except, indeed, my husband, whom you cannot see until he returns."

I was only twenty, and he stung me. "Your royal highness," I said, speaking as I believed within my rights, "my sister tries to put a good front on family I have seen since waking except Louis Philippe.

"Don't speak of that man, Louis. I detest the house of Orleans as a Christian should detest only sin. His father doomed ours to death."

"But he is not to blame for what his father did."

"What do you mean by waking?"

"Coming to my senses."

"All that we shall hear about when the king sees you."

"I knew your picture on the snuff-box."

"What snuffbox?"

"The one in the queen's jewel case."

"Where did you find that jewel case?"

"Do you remember the Marquis du Plessy?"

"Yes; a lukewarm loyalist, if loyalist at all in these times."

"My best friend."

"I will say for him that he was not among the first emigrants. If the first emigrants had stayed at home and helped their king they might have prevented the Terror."

"The Marquis du Plessy stayed after the Tulleries was sacked. He found the queen's jewel case and saved it from confiscation to the state."

"How did he find it? Did you recognize the faces?"

"Oh, instantly."

"The door opened, deferring any story, for that noble usher who had brought me to the presence of Marie Therese stood there ready to conduct us to the king."

My sister rose, and I led her by the hand, she going confidently to return the dauphin to his family, and the dauphin going like a fool. Seeing Skenedon standing by the door, I must stop and fit the key to the lock of the queen's casket and throw the lid back to show her proofs given me by one who believed in me in spite of himself.

The snuffbox and two bags of coins were gone. I saw with consternation, but the princess recognized so many things that she missed nothing, controlling herself as her touch moved from trinket to trinket that her mother had worn.

"Bring this before the king," she said. And we took it with us, the noble in blue coat and red collar carrying it.

"His majesty," Marie Therese told me we passed along a corridor, "to preserve the etiquette of a court in our exile. But we are paupers, Louis. And, mocking our poverty, Bonaparte makes overtures to him to sell the right of the Bourbons to the throne of France."

She had not yet adjusted her mind to the fact that Louis XVIII. was no longer the one to be treated with by Bonaparte.

For an instant I was crowned, part or any other potentate, and the pretender, leading her, smiled like the boy of twenty that he was.

"Napoleon can have no peace while a Bourbon in the line of succession lives."

"Oh, remember the Duke d'Enghien!" she whispered.

Then the door of a lofty but narrow cabinet lighted with many candles was opened, and I saw at the farther end a portly gentleman seated in an armchair.

A few gentlemen and two ladies in waiting, besides Mlle. de Choisy, attended.

Louis XVIII. rose from his seat as my sister made a deep obeisance to him and took her hand and kissed it. At once, moved by some singular maternal impulse perhaps, for she was half a dozen years my senior, as a mother would whimsically decorate her child, Marie Therese took the half circle of gems from the casket, reached up and set it on my head.

For an instant I was crowned in granite and a dark red stain show on his jaws like coloring on stone.

The most benevolent men, and by all his traits he was one of the most benevolent, have their pitiless moments. He must have been prepared to combat a pretender before I entered the room. But outraged majesty would now take its full vengeance on me for the unconsidered act of the child he loved.

"First two peasants, Hervacault and Bruneau, neither of whom had the audacity to steal into the confidence of the tenderest princess in Europe with the tokens she must recognize, or to penetrate into the presence," spoke the king, "and now an escaped convict from St. Pelagie, a dandy from the empire!"

I was only twenty, and he stung me. "Your royal highness," I said, speaking as I believed within my rights, "my sister tries to put a good front on my intrusion into Mittau."

I took the coronet from my head and gave it again to the hand which had crowned me. Marie Therese let it fall, and it rocked near the feet of the king.

"Your sister, monsieur! What right have you to call Mme. d'Angouleme your sister?"

"The same right, monsieur, that you have to call her your niece."

"The features of the princess became pinched and sharpened under the softness of her fair hair."

"Sire, if this is not my brother, who is he?"

Louis XVIII. may have been tender to her every other moment of his life, but he was hard then, and looked beyond her toward the door, making a sign with his hand.

The door opened again. We turned our heads, and I grew hot at the cruelty which put that idiot before my sister's eyes. He ran on all fours, his gaunt wrists exposed, until Belleguer, advancing behind, took him by the arm and made him stand erect.

How long Belleguer had been before-hand with me in Mittau I could not guess. But when I saw the scoundrel who had laid me in St. Pelagie and doubtless dropped me in the Seine, ready to do me more mischief, smug and smooth shaven and fine in the red collar blue coat which seemed to be the prescribed uniform of that court, all confidence returned. I was Louis of France. I could laugh at anything he had to say.

Behold him entered a priest, who advanced up the room and made obeisance to the king, as Belleguer did.

Mme. d'Angouleme looked once at the idiot and hid her eyes, the king protecting her. I said to myself:

"It will soon be against my breast, not yours, that she hides her face, my excellent niece of Provence."

Yet he was as sincere a man as ever said to witnesses, "We shall now hear the truth."

The few courtiers, enduring with hardness a sight which they perhaps had seen before, though Mme. d'Angouleme had not, made a rustle among themselves as if echoing, "Yes; now we shall hear the truth!"

The king again kissed my sister's hand and placed her in a seat beside his armchair, which he resumed.

"Monsieur the Abbe Edgeworth," he said, "having stood on the scaffold with our martyred sovereign as priest and comforter, is eminently the one to conduct an examination like this which touches matters of conscience. We leave it in his hands."

Abbe Edgeworth, fine and sweet of presence, stood by the king, facing Belleguer and the idiot. That poor creature, astonished by his environment, gazed at the high room corners or smiled experimentally at the courtiers, stretching his cracked lips over darkened fangs.

"You are admitted here, Belleguer," said the priest, "to answer his majesty's questions in the presence of witnesses."

"I thank his majesty," said Belleguer.

The abbe began as if the idiot attracted his notice for the first time.

"Who is the unfortunate child you hold with your right hand?"

"The dauphin of France, monsieur the abbe," spoke out Belleguer, his left hand on his hip.

"What! Take care what you say! How do you know that the dauphin of France is yet among the living?"

Belleguer's countenance changed, and he took his hand off his hip and let it hang down.

"I received the prince, monsieur, from those who took him out of the Temple prison."

"And you never exchanged him for another person or allowed him to be separated from you?"

Belleguer swore, with ghastly lips, "Never, or my hopes of salvation, monsieur the abbe."

"Admitting that somebody gave you this child to keep—by the way, how old is he?"

"About twenty years, monsieur."

"What right had you to assume he was the dauphin?"

"I had received a yearly pension, monsieur, from his majesty himself for the maintenance of the prince."

"You received the yearly pension through my hand, acting as his majesty's almoner. His majesty was ever too bountiful to the unfortunate. He has many dependents. Where have you lived with your charge?"

"We lived in America, sometimes in the woods and sometimes in towns."

"Has he ever shown hopeful signs of recovering his reason?"

"Never, monsieur the abbe."

Having touched thus lightly on the case of the idiot, Abbe Edgeworth turned to me.

"The king's face retained its granite hardness, but Belleguer's passed from shade to shade of baffled confidence, recovering only when the priest said: 'Now look at this young man. Have you ever seen him before?'

"Yes, monsieur, I have, both in the American woods and in Paris."

"What was he doing in the American woods?"

"Living on the bounty of one Count de Chaumont, a friend of Bonaparte's."

"Who is he?"

"A French half breed, brought up among the Indians."

"What name does he bear?"

"He is called Lazarre."

"But why is a French half breed named Lazarre attempting to force himself on the exiled court here in Mittau?"

"People have told him that he resembles the Bourbons, monsieur."

"Was he encouraged in this idea by the friends of Bonaparte whom you mentioned?"

"I think not, monsieur the abbe. But I heard a Frenchman tell him he was like the martyred king, and since that hour he has presumed to consider himself the dauphin."

"Who was this Frenchman?"

"The Duke of Orleans, Louis Philippe de Bourbon, monsieur the abbe."

There was an expressive movement among the courtiers.

"Was Louis Philippe instrumental in sending him to France?"

"He was. He procured shipping for the pretender."

"When the pretender reached Paris what did he do?"

"He attempted robbery and was taken in the act and thrown into St. Pelagie. I saw him arrested."

"What were you doing in Paris?"

"I was following and watching this dangerous pretender, monsieur the abbe."

SELDOM IF EVER

do the great investing public take advantage of the opportunities that are continually before them. It is invariably the custom of the every-day investor to wait until the hold and brainy men have demonstrated to them that they have something that is remarkably good, and after so demonstrating sell the same at a much higher price to the investing public than they themselves have purchased it for. It is right and proper that the men who have the boldness and courage to develop these enterprises while in their infancy should reap most of the benefit, but why should the investor wait until the prices are so high that there is but little if anything left for him? Why not be bold? Why not be a pioneer? Why not get in at the bottom and come to the top and get a part of the thick cream instead of waiting while it is taken off by others? The principal and almost the only thing for the average investor to do is to satisfy his own mind as to the character of the men with whom he is to become interested: are they honest, are they capable?

In calling your attention to the opportunity for investing in the mines owned by the

we desire to say, and invite you to satisfy yourself of the fact, that the management is in the hands of honest and capable men, and that they are willing to let you share with themselves in one of the greatest opportunities that will ever be offered to the investing public. Not a prospect that they want you to develop, but a mine they have developed with their own money and brains, only waiting the completion of the new to bring into the market one of the richest mining camps in that fabulously rich state of Utah, which has been known of for years, but which was inaccessible until the new railroad was built at the expense of millions of dollars. The Boston-Terrace Copper Mining Co. has been patiently waiting for the final consummation of this road, and in the meantime has been for the past four years going on with the development work of their properties so that, upon the completion of the road, and its management assure us that they will be ready to haul our ores in about four months, the Boston-Terrace Copper Mining Co. will be in a position to ship ore continuously to the smelters at Salt Lake City, and be able, from that time on, to pay dividends, not on a great capitalization,—for this company is only capitalized for $500,000, but, probably, on the most conservative capitalization of any mining company in the state of Utah. We are offering the stock to the investor at 75c. per share, full paid and non-assessable. Par value $1.00. We believe that it is the greatest and safest opportunity now before the public to accumulate a fortune, not in the future, but in the immediate present. It is not a prospect but a mine fully developed and only waiting for the cars to carry the ores to the smelters—ores which, according to the greatest mining expert in the state, Mr. Don Maguire, assay from $25.84 to over $1,100 per ton in gold, silver, lead, and copper.

If you are interested and wish to take advantage of this golden opportunity, or if you wish additional information, apply to

CHAS. T. BIRCHARD & CO., Fiscal Agents, 53 State St., Boston.

"Did you leave America when he did?"

"The evening before, monsieur. And we outstayed him."

THOMASTON HAPPENINGS

A WINTER CARNIVAL

Thomaston will be in the swim with local theatricals and minstrel entertainments this fall and winter, and already preparations are being made to put on the stage at Watts hall a series of entertainments which will be profitable and interesting. The Segoechet Club will organize a dramatic association and present a series of popular plays, while the famous Black Bird minstrel troupe will begin rehearsing in the early fall and will present an entertainment even surpassing that of last season. In connection with the minstrel troupe an indoor circus will be given. This kind of entertainment is something new for Thomaston, and wherever presented has been very popular. There will be the ring, the elephant, tiger, lion, monkey and many other animals, the bearded lady, the long haired lady, fat man, snake charmer, with her coiling serpents, tumblers, acrobats, ring-master, funny clowns, etc., side shows and everything circus-like. Eddie La Barre, the well-known comedian and actor will be with the show.

CAPT. LERMOND INJURED.

A telegram received by Washburn Bros. a few days ago announced that Capt. William J. Lermond of the ill-fated schooner Washington B. Thomas was struck and knocked down by a trolley car and has his collar-bone broken, his head cut and side injured. Later information says that the captain was hit by the car at 54th street, Columbus avenue, New York city. He is now in a private hospital, but the doctor thinks he will be about again in two weeks. Capt. Lermond was making his home with his sister in New York.

LIVED IN KNOX MANSION.

Dexter Grafton and wife of New York, who were visiting in town have left for their home. Mr. Grafton formerly lived in this town, and first left here about 40 years ago. He has the distinction of having lived for nearly 14 years in "Montpelier," the once grand mansion of Maj. Gen. Henry Knox. He also lived in the farm house of Knox, which is now standing and known as the Maine Central railroad station. This last visit is the third by Mr. Grafton since 1860. His many friends were very glad to meet him. He is an engineer on the steamer Maryland.

THE CONTEST.

Coupon clipping and the gathering of votes has become a mania with Thomaston people. Not many have been turned into this office as yet but we know that they are being collected. Mrs. Amanda B. Allen is a new contestant looking for the beautiful range we are offering. There is yet plenty of time for other ladies to enter and win out. There is no luck to this contest. The number of votes received indicates the amount of work performed and the one who gets the most votes wins. The standing to date is as follows:

Mrs. Lilla M. Carter.....500
Mrs. M. Louise Lermond.....100
Mrs. Amanda B. Allen.....50

Wallace Edgerton and wife, who have been visiting relatives in town, returned to Boston today.

Rev. W. A. Newcombe and family and W. G. Washburn and family enjoyed an outing and clam bake at Taylor's Point, Thursday.

Edward Ahern is ill at his home, Dunn street.

C. N. McNeil of New Orleans, La., who has been visiting at W. R. Smith's, has returned home.

Mrs. Lilla E. Hart and son Clinton of Hartford, Conn., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Tobie.

Edith Frances Harrington and Clifford Mero Spear, both of Warren, were united in marriage by Rev. A. H. Hanson at the M. E. parsonage Tuesday evening.

Clarence A. Pendleton sings at the Segoechet Club entertainment an aria in Italian from the opera of Salvatore Rosa by Gomes, called "Di spaso di padre," also "The Two Grenadiers," by Schumann.

The St. John Baptist sale at the Knox Hotel parlors was successful and many pretty fancy articles, aprons, and also home-made candles were sold.

George W. Moulton, business manager of the Uncle Terry Co., was in town Wednesday arranging for the appearance of his company at Watts hall next Tuesday evening.

All short waists are being painted. Misses Nellie and Vidie Gardner and Louise Cushing were among those who attended the Maine Festival at Old Orchard, Friday.

Emerson Watts is to move to Boston the first of next month.

Miss Ethel Vose has returned from Brunswick.

Edward Keating of Worcester, Mass., is visiting here.

Prof. C. L. Raper of the University of California is a guest at the home of Judge A. N. Linscott.

The entertainment and "ladies' business meeting" at the Congregational vestry Wednesday evening was an interesting affair and called out quite a goodly number of persons. The solos by Miss Robinson and Mr. Jones were nicely rendered, while the violin solo by Miss Jordan was especially good. Ice cream, cake and candy were sold.

A large number of women and children attended the M. E. Sunday school picnic at Oakland Wednesday.

Schooner Samuel Hart, Maloney, is in port with coal for J. A. Creighton & Co. She will load lime for New York.

W. H. Benner is at home.

Eugene Henry and family of Buffalo, N. Y., are visiting in town.

George Robinson of Rockland is subbing at the central telephone office, while the night operator, Charles Beveridge, is on a camping expedition.

Mr. and Mrs. Levi Seavey very pleasantly entertained a party of about 25 at their pretty home on Gleason street Wednesday evening. A picnic supper was served. During the evening vocal solos were nicely rendered by Messrs. Maurice Metcalf, Charles Payson and Eugene Henry. Games proved to be an interesting feature.

Albert Marsh leaves Saturday for Bucksport, where he has engaged to take a month's outing with a party of friends.

The brick yard whistle sends forth a welcome sound.

Fred Copeland, engineer at the prison, is having a vacation.

Miss Ellen Wright of Florida is visiting Mrs. Louise Lermond.

Miss Josephine Gaffney and Frank Pierce of Whitefield are guests at John McCoy's, Wadsworth street.

Misses Katherine Peehan and Sadie Linnell have been visiting in St. George for a day or two.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Annis of East Pepperell, Mass., are visiting at I. S. Jameson's on Green street.

Miss Bertha Kimball of Washington, D. C., who has been visiting at A. C. Strout's, left Friday for Cape Rozier.

Miss Bertha Meserve of Wilmington, Del., a Miss Genie Meserve of Jefferson are guests at the home of H. B. Meserve.

Don't miss the Segoechet Club entertainment.

The pictures of 12 convicts who escaped from the state prison at Folsom, Calif., July 27, adorn the criminal bulletin board at the prison in this town. There is $50 reward for each man, who has all four.

Miss Irene Thayer and Miss Mollie Jameson have returned from an outing at Miss Thayer's cottage near Camden.

Capt. I. D. Darby is home for a few days. His vessel, the James R. Talbot, is in Rockland, where she brought coal for Simmons, White & Co. Last Wednesday morning, in a bluish fog, he ran near enough to sight a large five-masted schooner anchored just off the eastern end of Georges Island. The vessel was safe as long as the wind didn't change to the southeast.

E. F. Adams of Boston, Mass., is visiting friends in town.

Sidney Watts, who has been visiting his former home here, returned to Boston today.

Ralph French of New York is among the Old Home week visitors.

Two young ladies with faces darkened by an application of burnt cork were on the promenade a night or two ago. The lassies naturally caused somewhat of a sensation to the bystanders and were escorted by a young man's suit, with slouch hat, while the other retained the dress of her sex. On their last trip up the street the crowd attended the colored couple to some extent but only received in reply, O! gee! and with a saucy little nod of the head the two moved on to the West End. It is said that they reached the house of a friend who is a colored gentleman who mistook them for some of his people and asked them where they were walking when he had a team down town.

The golf links are now laid out and ready for the season. Golf is a game which both young and old can play and all who are interested are cordially invited to join the club. The dues are only fifty cents and should be paid to the treasurer, Nettie Levensaler.

There was a fair-sized crowd present at the annual White Duck ball at Watts hall, Tuesday evening, and all speak very highly of the entertainment afforded. There was quite a party from Rockland, but there was no dancing.

More than a hundred more had the sad drowning accident. Meserve's orchestra furnished music for the dance and on the whole it was a success.

Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Walker entertained 36 of the old home week visitors at their handsome home on Main street Thursday evening. Dinner was served at 6:30 and in the evening the popular game of billiards was played. A pleasing musical added to the enjoyable occasion.

Sidney S. Watts, Thomas Fales and wife and Henry Curran, who have been seen at the Old Home Week guests, will return to Boston Saturday.

Capt. Walter Willey is at home.

Miss Sara E. Miller, who gave a delightful reception to the Congregational church in Rockland last week, will be heard in a solo at the Congregational church here Sunday before her return to Augusta, where she holds the position of soprano in the Universalist quartet choir. Miss Miller who is a Rockland girl, first won fame as a singer some years ago while studying with Mrs. Coppin in the Universalist church. Since that time she has pursued her training in Portland, Boston and Augusta and appears this season before her audiences with a style, finish and charming manner which leaves nothing to be desired.

Mrs. Lillian Sprague Copping, director of music at the Congregational church, announces that Miss Rose Hayden, contralto soloist in the Universalist church, will sing a solo at the morning service next Sunday. A quartet consisting of Miss Ruth S. Robinson, Miss Rose Hayden, Miss Nicol and Mr. Ralph Cushing will sing the responses. At the vesper service at 4:30, Miss Mary Louise Jordan, violinist, will play Schumann's "Traumerei" and Mrs. Copping will sing "Sound's 'Repentance.'" J. Francis MacNicol of Augusta will preside at the organ. The choir members are requested to be at the church for rehearsal with the organist at 3:45 Sunday morning.

Mrs. E. B. CALDERWOOD

The community of North Warren received a great shock in the unexpected announcement of the death of Mrs. E. B. Calderwood which occurred Wednesday, July 29. While not in her usual health for some time, she had been about the house until within about two weeks of her death, when she took her bed, and growing rapidly worse, a consultation of physicians revealed a condition necessitating an operation. Taken to the hospital in Rockland the operation disclosed difficulties that made the saving of life impossible. Mrs. Calderwood was a woman loved and respected by all who knew her. A faithful and consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church, in whose fellowship she had the pleasure of seeing her six children united, her life and work were never limited by denominational ties, but being heart and hand with all who sought to uplift the moral standard of the community, she was ready for her part in every good work. A loving wife and mother, a loyal friend and neighbor, a thoughtful and active church member, her influence will long remain a blessed memory, and again and again will it be truly said of her "She being dead, yet speaketh."

Mrs. Mary Whipple died at her home in Rockport July 27, aged 76 years. She was born and passed the early years of her life in Eastport. Since 1875 she has made her home in Rockport. She was a very estimable lady and won a host of friends by her bright cheerful manner, and her sympathetic and ever helpful disposition. She has been a widow since the war of the rebellion. Her husband was a corporal in Co. E, 31st regiment of Maine volunteers and was killed in one of the battles in which that regiment took part. Her only child, a daughter Miss Cassie Whipple, a young lady of marked musical ability and considerable talent as an artist, died some years ago and since then Mrs. Whipple lived alone. Her illness was of short duration and she patiently awaited the summons which would unite her and the loved ones who had preceded her in the other land. She is survived by four sisters, Mrs. Russell of Portland, Mrs. Temple San Francisco, Mrs. Knowlton of Auburn and Miss Carrie of New Orleans.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

A review from the columns of the Rockland Gazette, of some of the events which transpired in the vicinity for the fortnight ending Aug. 15, 1878.

Rev. Mr. Chase accepted a call to the Baptist church in Bath. W. O. Fletcher resigned as principal of the Rockland High school and accepted a similar position in Biddeford. Eben D. Carleton, while working on Brown's wharf, fell from a log and his right leg was broken.

Rev. E. B. Haskell, pastor of the Cedar Street Baptist church, preached his farewell sermon, prior to leaving for his new field in Minnesota.

Political item in the Gazette: "It has been reported that the blatant big game hunter, Dennis Kearney, is expected to be present at the stonecutter's gathering at Castine. We presume this meeting is intended to further the congressional prospects of the stonecutter. Maine has no use for such a Kearney, and unless the gods have determined to destroy Mr. Murch politically, and have first made him mad, he will steer clear of Kearney."

Mrs. Paulina S. Merrill, widow of Dr. John Merrill, and mother of J. Fred and Edward Merrill, died at the age of 67 years.

James Wright was commissioned by the Knox county Fish and Game Association to stock Chickawaukie Lake with black bass.

The officers elected by Limerock Valley Lodge of Good Templars were: J. U. Farrington, F. D. Vezie, P. W. Brown, A. L. Walsh, H. Walsh, H. Robbins, T. J. Brown, A. L. Carleton, Susan Maloy, E. M. Lawson and Maynard Williams.

Augustus T. Low, sheriff of Knox county, died from an attack of pneumonia. Mr. Low was 54 years of age and had been a teacher in the grammar schools. In 1876 and 1877 he was Rockland's city marshal.

A. D. Blackington, who was appointed by the citizens' committee to examine and survey Oyster River Pond (Mirror Lake), to ascertain its capacity for supplying the city with pure water. From his report to the committee some interesting facts appeared. The pond is 6.37 miles from Rockland, the distance from the foot of the pond to the postoffice being 38.16 feet. The height of the pond above the city is 350 feet.

At Camden Beach & Brown were building a three-masted schooner, of 400 tons for Capt. Johnson of Tenants' Harbor. The schooner was made free to public travel. This bridge was chartered before the separation of Maine from Massachusetts, receiving its charter from the latter state.

Capt. John B. Henry of the Thomaston ship Kendrick Fish died at sea.

The following births were recorded: Rockland, Aug. 13, to Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Priest, a son. Rockland, Aug. 15, to Mr. and Mrs. E. Mont Perry, a son. Thomaston, Aug. 15, to Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Creamer, a daughter. Thomaston, July 31, to Mr. and Mrs. Patrick McNamara, a daughter.

The marriages of the two weeks were as follows: Rockland, Aug. 3, George W. Davis and Miss Fannie S. Crawford, both of Warren. Friendship, July 31, Joseph M. Cushman and Miss Rose E. Murphy, both of Friendship. Appletown, Aug. 3, Newell Wentworth of Appletown and Miss Lizzie Davis of Massachusetts.

WALDOBORO
John L. Harrison has returned to Chelsea, Mass. Miss Maude Fish of Lowell, Mass., is visiting at Wm. Feyer's. Ralph Giddens has come from Boston. Miss Angie Jones of Warren, is visiting her cousin, Miss Kate Achorn. George Mank has gone to South Framingham, Mass. for a visit. Miss Mildred Palmer of Bath, is visiting Miss Mabel Clark. George Benner of Fall River, Mass., is in town, called here by the death of his daughter Addie.

Nelson Hamaker employed in the shipyard, had his foot cut quite badly last week.

Eiden Welt, the ice man, met with a painful accident last week. His horse ran away, throwing him to the ground and breaking a leg. He also sustained other injuries. Mr. Welt has been extremely unfortunate as this is the second time the same has been hurt. Miss Amanda Harriman of South Framingham, Mass., is visiting at George H. Matthews.

Mrs. Alden Clough and daughter of Springfield, Mass., is at Benj. Ludwig's.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.
Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order. Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child wakes an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonials received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

IN THEATRICAL CIRCLES.

Season at Farwell Opera House Will Open Monday With Strong Attraction.

The Clara Turner Company will be at the Farwell opera house all next week presenting on Monday night, opening with "The Sapphires," a play well calculated to arouse and hold interest. It gets its name from a hold of the strongly romantic and dramatic incidents of the play when the hero gives the little maiden of the Sierra a valuable sapphire ring, an heirloom, as a betrothal ring. His mother comes upon the scene just as he is pleading his cause with the father of Gussie. She had determined he should marry his foster-sister, Gussie arrives and gives him back the sapphire which he refuses to accept. A secret marriage and the scene changes to the English home of the husband. When Gussie learns her husband is beginning to despair of teaching her correct forms of speech she determines to leave him, his old love revives and in a strong affecting scene she bids him goodbye going away with a long lost brother who opportunely appears. The final scene is in the studio where Gussie's talent as a sculptor has made her famous. She masquerades as a French woman with a pretty accent. The disguise did not deceive the eyes of the lover and a reconciliation follows and "all live happy ever after."

The Bostonians, a theatrical and operatic organization, was incorporated at Albany on July 23 with a capital of $100,000. The directors are Henry Clay Barnabee, William H. McDonald, A. Parker Nevin, Emile Buguliere, and Boudon G. Charlton, of New York city, where the offices of the company are located. Two new operas will this season be produced.

The advance season seats for the Clara Turner Company will open this morning at the box office and we advise everyone wishing to attend the opening performance for the season 1903-'04 to secure their seats early as there will be a grand rush for the ladies' tickets, which are limited to 400. This is the first time in this city of Miss Clara Turner and her all-star stock company, including their own concert orchestra and the best line of vaudeville features ever carried by a popular priced company of this kind. Only one matinee will be given during the engagement here, on Saturday. Seats may be secured for any night during the engagement after 9 o'clock today.

Gorton's Big American Minstrels are all new this year. The company has original first part settings, new costumes, music and dances with an olio of refined vaudeville, strictly up-to-date, by the best artists in this line of business. Without a doubt Gorton's Concert Band is the finest street band traveling with a minstrel company. Don't forget the date, Thursday, Aug. 27, one night only.

Claude Neilson, a farmer who resides near Onabek, N. H., was last week granted an injunction which states that the balloon which arises twice daily from Courtland Beach must not descend upon his property, destroy his crops, frighten his live stock, or on several occasions the balloon has alighted on Mr. Neilson's farm and in its gentle progress over the ground has discouraged his crops, frightened his live stock, and on one occasion the balloon came almost into fits, and caused the peaceful cow to kick over the pail. In revenge, it is said, Mr. Neilson has compelled the aeronauts to pay before he would let them remove their property, and on one occasion shot guard over the $200000 and sent. The balloon was recovered by means of a writ of replevin.

There is nothing so disheartening to the intelligent theatre-goer as to find the intelligent theatre-goer as to find the tune of a miserably presented Shakespearean play, and alas what crimes are fostered upon the public under the cloak of Shakespeare. Our local managers cannot be blamed for such disappointments. He gives the date asked for and hopes for the best, but once in a while, keenly alive to the desires of his patrons, he goes to unusual trouble to secure a real treat that he is sure of and he has already been in correspondence with managers at the New York theatre building, to secure one of the best companies that will leave New York this season playing "As You Like It." If successful, we can be assured of a rare treat.

Richard Golden's "Old Jed Prouty" is a play depicting life in a country village in Maine. While we laugh heartily at the quaint sayings of "Old Jed Prouty," we are conscious that we are moved by the simplicity of the story, for a time forget that it is a stage play, in the absorbing interest of the various characters. The cast includes Charles Cowles, Harry Morse, De Will C. Mott, J. Bertrand Evelyn Wood, Dorothy Alden, James E. Nichols, George Canning, Little Lillian Lyons and others. At Farwell opera house, Monday evening, Aug. 24.

On the magic curtain of the Colonial Moving Picture company an Oriental Evening, will be projected the most attractive and refined moving pictures ever conceived. The company appears here under the auspices of the Epworth League on Wednesday evening Sept. 3. The entire entertainment will prove a strengthening cordial, a cheering tonic to every patron. The patience, perseverance and close and continuous study of the Colonial Moving Picture company enables them to project animated pictures with less vibration and greater brilliancy than has ever been attained heretofore. This company has just completed a four years tour of the world, giving private performances before the nobility and royalty in every part of the globe. The press has unanimously pronounced the entertainment the easy peer of any of its class. The Chinese wall has been scaled, and obstacles surmounted to obtain some of the finest subjects of Indian China. The most dramatic at Maritigue will be shown with a power of detail that no spectator will forget. There will be exhibited a complete production of the famous extravaganza "Jack and the Beanstalk," fully illustrated, the most popular fairy story ever written. This subject will be specially interesting. A trip around the world cannot fail to arouse the genuine enthusiasm, and will prove an inimitable journey. There is, in addition, novel and inviting specialties. Popular prices rule. There will be a matinee in the afternoon for the children.

Suicide Prevented.
The startling announcement that a preventive of suicide had been discovered would interest many. A run down system, or despondency invariably causes a person to lose touch with reality and find something to condition which makes suicide likely.

At the first thought of self destruction take Electric Bitters. It being a great tonic and nerve tonic, something to nerves and build up the system. It's also a great stomach, liver and kidney regulator. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by W. H. Kittredge, Druggist.

The Death Penalty.
A little thing sometimes results in death. Thus a mere scratch, insignificant cuts or puny boils have paid the death penalty. It is wise to have Bucklin's Arnica Salve ever had. It's the best salve on earth and will prevent fatality, when Burns, Sores, Ulcers and Piles threaten. Only 25c, at W. H. Kittredge's drug store.

BURKETTVILLE
A. K. Burkett is having his carriage house made into a store. Ben Ware, John House and Bud Sherman are doing the job.

RETIREMENT OF MILES.

He Held the Highest Possible Rank in the American Army.

General Miles retired from active service Monday, having reached the age limit of 64 years, after a long and distinguished career. He entered the volunteer service with the rank of captain on September 9, 1861, so that his total length of service is nearly 42 years.

During the civil war his promotion was rapid, and in October, 1865, he reached the rank of major general of volunteers. Next year he entered the regular army, on July 28, 1866, with the rank of colonel. For fourteen years he served without promotion, but on December 18, 1880, he became a brigadier general. Hence on his retirement he has been a general officer of the regular army between twenty-two and twenty-three years—a record unequalled by any living officer. In April, 1890, he was promoted to be major general.

On the retirement of General Schofield he succeeded to the command of the army, and on June 6, 1900 Congress made him lieutenant general—the highest possible rank in the American army, and one held by few. General Miles' predecessors in this office were Washington, Scott, Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, and Schofield. It is a distinguished line, and a distinguished honor. With his retirement the title ceases to exist, and his successor, General Young, becomes chief of staff in the new army organization.

General Miles took part in all the battles of the Army of the Potomac, with one exception, and was wounded three times. On his banner, if he had not been killed in the action at Antietam, Chancellorsville—for gallantry in which he received the star of brigadier—the battle of the Wilderness, Spotsylvania Court House, which won him promotion to the major general rank, Ream's Station, and other well known names of actions in the campaigns of the Army of the Potomac. Nor did his distinguished services end with the civil war, for afterward he did good work in Indian warfare.

In 1875, when the Cheyenne, Kiowa and Comanche tribes went on the warpath, General Miles defeated them on the Staked Plains. In 1878 he subdued the hostile Sioux in Montana, driving Sitting Bull across the Canadian frontier and breaking up the band led by Crazy Horse.

Later in the same year he captured the Nez Perces and Chief Joseph in northern Montana, and in 1878 he captured a band of Bannocks near Yellowstone Park.

By the results of these campaigns General Miles practically put an end for a time to the danger of Indian depredations in those parts of the country, and a few years later he did the same thing for the people of the far southwest. The settlers of Arizona and New Mexico were being harassed by the ruthless and blood-thirsty Apaches, but in 1886 Miles undertook to suppress these raids and after a long and difficult campaign, in which he performed some of his finest deeds, he compelled the chiefs Geronimo and Natchez to surrender to him, and from that day to this the Apaches have ceased to give trouble.

The same may be said of the other troublesome tribes. Since Miles put down the Kiowas, Comanches, Cheyennes, Nez Perces, Sioux, Bannocks and Apaches there has been very little going on the warpath.

For his services he received the thanks of the legislatures of Kansas, Arizona, New Mexico, and the citizens of Tucson gave him a sword of honor. His activities in the field practically ended with the cessation of the Indian uprisings, except that he led the brief campaign in Porto Rico, which came to an end on Spain's crying enough and asking for an armistice.

EAST WARREN.

THOMASTON.

Save your coupons in the range contest.

Capt. Marcus Hewett of Saluda, Va., is visiting his brother J. H. Hewett on Main street. His many friends are pleased to see him back again and he is receiving many a hearty hand shake. The old soldiers are especially pleased to greet him. Capt. Hewett served in Co. G, 2nd Maine Vol. Inf., during the Civil War.

J. Herbert Walsh and wife, who have been visiting in town for two weeks, returned home Saturday.

Walter Hall should be filled to the door next Friday evening when the entertainment given by the Seagoat Club takes place. Considerable preparation has been made for the occasion and the entertainment will be worthy of patronage. The one act emotional drama Forget-Me-Not and the laughable comedy Grandpa are on the program. There will be vocal selections by Clarence A. Pendleton of Rockland and readings and impersonations by Fenner Dennett of Lewiston. The Farwell Opera House Orchestra will furnish music.

There was a game of ball on the Knox grounds Thursday of last week that excited considerable interest. The contestants were teams captained by Percy Moody and Winthrop Brown. Moody's team won by a score of 15 to 6.

Frank Hanley of Chicago, Ill., is visiting his home here.

A Physician Healed.
Dr. Geo. Ewin, a practicing physician of Smith's Grove, Ky., for over thirty years, writes his personal experience with Foley's Kidney Cure: "For years I had been greatly bothered with kidney and bladder trouble and enlarged prostate gland. I used everything known to the profession without relief, until I commenced to use Foley's Kidney Cure. After taking three bottles I was entirely relieved and heartily recommend its use to all physicians for such troubles. I have prescribed it in hundreds of cases with perfect success." Many persons in this community are suffering from kidney complaint who could avoid fatal results by using Foley's Kidney Cure. W. C. Pooler, Atkins & McDonald, Thomaston.
